The corn beginneth to fork. Mortimer's Husbandry.
FORKED, adj. [from fork.] Opening into two or more parts.
 When he was naked he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife.

Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. ii.
 Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish,
 A forked mountain, or blue promontory.
 Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
 And yet it irks me the poor dappled fools
 Should, in their own confines, with forked heads,
 Have their round haunches goar'd. Shakespeare, As you like it.

He would have spoke;
 But his for his return'd, with forked tongue
 To forked tongue. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. x.
 Ye dragons, whose contagious breath
 Peoples the dark retreats of death,
 Change your fierce hissing into joyful song,
 And praise your maker with your forked tongue. Rescommen.

FORKEDLY, adv. [from forked.] In a forked form.

FORKEDNESS, n. f. [from forked.] The quality of opening into two parts.

FORKHEAD, n. f. [fork and head.] Point of an arrow.
 It seizing, no way enter might;
 Put back rebounding, left the forkhead keen,
 Eitfoons it fled away, and might no where be seen. Fa. Qu.
FORKY, adj. [from fork.] Forked; furcated; opening into two parts.

The smiling infant in his hand shall take
 The crested basilisk and speckled snake;
 Pleas'd the green lustre of the scales survey,
 And with their forky tongue and pointless fang shall play.

Pope's Messiah.
FORLORE, [The preterite and participle of the Saxon forleornan, in Dutch verloren.] Deserted; forlorn; forsaken.

 Where all the nymphs have her forlore. Fairy Queen, b. ii.

That wretched world he 'gan for to abhor,
 And mortal life 'gan loath, as thing forlore. Fairy Queen.
 Thus fell the trees, with noise the deserts roar;
 The beasts their caves, the birds their nests forlore. Fairy Queen.

FORLORN, adj. [from forleorn, from forleornan, Saxon; verloren, Dutch.]

Deserted; destitute; forsaken; wretched; helpless; solitary.

Make them seek for that they want to scorn;
 Of fortune and of hope at once forloren. Hubbard's Tale.
 Tell me, good Hobinot, what gars thee greet?
 What! hath some wolf thy tender lambs yorn?

Or is thy baggage broke, that sounds so sweet?
 Or art thou of thy loved lass forloren? Spenser's Pastoral.
 In every place was heard the lamentation of women and children; every thing shewed the heaviness of the time, and seemed as altogether lost and forloren.

Kneller's History.
 How can I live without thee! how forego
 Thy sweet converse, and love to dearly join'd,
 To live again in these wild woods forloren! Milt. Par. Lost.

Their way
 Lies through the perplex'd paths of this drear wood;
 The nodding horror of whose shady brows,
 Threats the forloren and wand'ring passenger. Milton.

My only strength and stay! forloren of thee,
 Whither shall I betake me, where subsist! Milt. Par. Lost.
 Like a declining statesman, left forloren

To his friends pity and pursuers scorn. Denham.
 The good old man, forloren of human aid,
 For vengeance to his heav'nly patron pray'd. Dryd. liad.

Philomel laments forloren. Fenton.
 As some sad turtle his lost love deplores,
 Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn;
 Alike unheard, unpitied, and forloren. Pope's Autumn.

2. Lost; desperate.

What is become of great Acrates' son?
 Or where hath he hung up his mortal blade,
 That hath so many haughty conquests won?
 Is all his force forloren, and all his glory done? Fairy Queen.

 And fore'd to live in Scotland a forloren. Shakespeare, Henry VI.

2. FORLORN, Hope. The soldiers who are sent first to the attack, and are therefore doomed to perish.

Criticks in plume,
 Who lolling on our foremost benches sit,
 And still charge first, the true forloren of wit. Dryden.

FORLORNNESS, n. f. [from forloren.] Destitution; misery; solitude.

Men displeased God, and consequently forfeited all right to happiness; even whilst they completed the forlorenness of their condition by the lethargy of not being sensible of it. Boyle.

TO FORLYE, v. n. [from for and lye.] To lye acrofs.

Knit with a golden baldric, which forlye
 Athwart her snowy breast, and did divide
 Her dainty paps, which, like young fruit in May,
 Now little 'gan to swell; and being ty'd,
 Through her thin weed, their places only signify'd. Fa. Qu.

FORM, n. f. [forma, Latin; forme, French.]

1. The external appearance of any thing; representation; shape.

Nay, women are frail too.
 —Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves,
 Which are as easily broke as they make forms. Shakespeare.

It stood still; but I could not discern the form thereof. Job.
 Gold will endure a vehement fire, without any change, and after it has been divided by corrosive liquors into invisible parts; yet may presently be precipitated, so as to appear again in its form. Grew's Cosmol. Sac. b. i.

Matter, as wise logicians say,
 Cannot without a form subsist;
 And form, say I as well as they,
 Must fail, if matter brings no grief. Swift.

2. Being, as modified by a particular shape.

When noble benefits shall prove
 Not well dispos'd, the mind grown once corrupt,
 They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
 Than ever they were fair. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

Here toils and death, and death's half-brother, sleep,
Forms terrible to view, their sentry keep;
 With anxious pleasures of a guilty mind,
 Deep frauds before, and open force behind. Dryden's En.

3. Particular mode of modification.

He that will look into many parts of Asia and America, will find man reason there perhaps as acutely as himself, who yet never heard of a syllogism, nor can reduce any one argument to those forms. Locke.

It lengthens out every act of worship, and produces more lasting and permanent impressions in the mind, than those which accompany any transient form of words that are uttered in the ordinary method of religious worship. Addison.

4. Beauty; elegance of appearance.

He hath no form nor comeliness. Isa. liii. 2.

Then those whom form of laws
 Condemn'd to die, when traitors judg'd their cause. Dryden.
 They were young heirs sent only for form from schools, where they were not placed to stay three months in the year. Swift's Essay on Modern Education.

7. Ceremony; external rites.

Though well we may not pass upon his life,
 Without the form of justice; yet our pow'r
 Shall do a court'ly to our wrath, which men
 May blame, but not controul. Shakespeare's King Lear.

A long table, and a square table, or seat about the walls, seem things of form, but are things of substance; for at a long table, a few at the upper end, in effect, sway all the business; but in the other form, there is more use of the counsellors' opinions that sit lower. Bacon's Essay 53.

That the parliaments of Ireland might want no decent or honourable form used in England, he caused a particular act to pass that the lords of Ireland should appear in parliament robes. Davies in Ireland.

Their general used, in all dispatches made by himself, to observe all decency in their forms. Clarendon, b. viii.

How am I to interpret, sir, this visit?
 Is it a compliment of form, or love? A. Phil. Dis. Math.

8. Stated method; established practice.

He who affirmeth speech to be necessary amongst all men, throughout the world, doth not thereby import that all men must necessarily speak one kind of language; even so the necessity of polity and regimen in all churches may be held, without holding any one certain form to be necessary in them all. Hagker, b. iii. f. 2.

Nor are constant forms of prayer more likely to flatter and hinder the spirit of prayer and devotion, than unpremeditated and confuted variety to distract and lose it. King Charles.

Nor seek to know
 Their process, or the forms of law below. Dryden's En.

9. A long seat.

If a chair be defined a seat for a single person, with a back belonging to it, then a stool is a seat for a single person without a back; and a form is a seat for several persons, without a back. Watt's Logic.

I was seen with her in the manorhouse, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park. Shakespeare.

10. A class; a rank of students.

6. To contrive; to coin.

The defeat of the design is the routing of opinions form'd for promoting it. Decay of Piety.

He dies too soon;
 And fate, if possible, must be delay'd:
 The thought that labours in my forming brain,
 Yet crude and immature, demands more time. Rowe.

7. To model by education or institution.

Let him to this with easy pains be brought,
 And seem to labour when he labours not:
 Thus form'd for speed, he challenges the wind,
 And leaves the Scythian arrow far behind. Dryd. Virg. Geo.

FORMAL, adj. [formal, French; formalis, Latin.]

1. Ceremonious; solemn; precise; exact to affection:

The justice,
 In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,
 With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
 Full of wise saws and modern instances,
 And so he plays his part. Shakespeare's As you like it.

Formal in apparel,
 In gait and countenance surely like a father. Shakespeare.

Ceremonies especially be not to be omitted to strangers and formal natures; but the exalting them above the mean is not only tedious, but doth diminish the credit of him that speaks. Bacon's Essay 53.

2. Done according to established rules and methods; not irregular; not sudden; not extemporaneous.

There is not any positive law of men, whether it be general or particular, received by formal express consent, as in councils; or by secret approbation, as in customs it cometh to pass, but the same may be taken away, if occasion serve. Hooker, b. iv. f. 14.

As there are formal and written leagues, respective to certain enemies; so there is a natural and tacit confederation amongst all men against the common enemy of human society, so as there needs no intimation or denunciation of the war; but all these formalities the law of nature supplies, as in the case of pyrates. Bacon's Holy War.

3. Regular; methodical.

The formal stars do travel so,
 As we their names and courses know;
 And he that on their changes looks,
 Would think them govern'd by our books. Waller.

4. External; having the appearance but not the essence.

Of formal duty, make no more thy boast;
 Thou disobey't where it concerns me most. Dryd. Aureng.

5. Depending upon establishment or custom.

Still in constraint your suffering sex remains,
 Or bound in formal or in real chains. Pope.

6. Having the power of making any thing what it is; constituent; essential.

Of letters the material part is breath and voice: the formal is constituted by the motions and figure of the organs of speech affecting breath with a peculiar sound, by which each letter is discriminated. Held's Elements of Speech.

FOR

Bellarmino agrees in making the formal act of adoration to be subjection to a superior; but withal he makes the mere apprehension of excellency to include the formal reason of it: whereas mere excellency, without superiority, doth not require any subjection, but only estimation. Stillington.

The very life and vital motion, and the formal essence and nature of man, is wholly owing to the power of God. Lentl.

7. Retaining its proper and essential characteristic.

Thou shoud'st come like a fury cover'd with snakes,
 Not like a formal man. Shakespeare, Ant. and Cleopatra.
 I will not let him stir,
 'Till I have us'd th' approved means I have;
 With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,
 To make of him a formal man again. Shakespeare, Com. of Err.

FORMALIST, n. f. [formaliste, French, from form.] One who practises external ceremony; one who preters appearance to reality; one who seems what he is not.

It is a ridiculous thing, and fit for a satyr to persons of judgment, to see what shifts formalists have, and what prospectives to make superficies to seem a body that hath depth and bulk. Bacon, Essay 27.

A grave, stanch, skilfully managed face, set upon a grasping aspiring mind, having got many a formalist the reputation of a primitive and severe piety. South's Sermons.

FORMALITY, n. f. [formalite, French, from form.]

1. Ceremony; established mode of behaviour.

The attire, which the minister of God is by order to use at times of divine service, is but a matter of mere formality, yet such as for comeliness sake hath hitherto been judged not unnecessary. Hooker, b. v. f. 19.

Formalities of extraordinary zeal and piety are never more studied and elaborate than in desperate deliriums. King Charles.

Many a worthy man sacrifices his peace to formalities of compliment and good manners. L'Estrange, Fable 184.

Nor was his attendance on divine offices a matter of formality and custom, but of conscience. Atterbury's Sermons.

2. Solemn order, habit, or dress.

If men forswear the deeds and bonds they draw,
 Though sign'd with all formality of law;
 And though the signing and the seal proclaim
 The barefaced perjury, and fix the shame. Dryden's Juven.

The pretender would have infallibly landed in our northern parts, and found them all flat down in their formalities, as the Gauls did the Roman senators. Swift.

3. Essence; the quality by which any thing is what it is.

To fix on God the formality of faculties, or affections, is the imposture of our fancies, and contradictory to his divinity. Glauco, Sect. c. 13.

May not a man vow to A. and B. that he will give a hundred pound to an hospital? Here the vow is made both to God and to A. and B. But here A. and B. are only witnesses to the vow; but the formality of the vow lies in the promise made to God. Stillington's Def. of Diss. on Rom. Idol.

TO FORMALIZE, v. a. [formaliser, French, from formal.]

1. To model; to modify. A word not now in use.

The same spirit which anointed the blessed soul of our Saviour Christ, doth so formalize, unite, and actuate his whole race, as if both he and they were to many limbs compacted into one body. Hooker, b. v. f. 56.

2. To affect formality; to be fond of ceremony.

FORMALLY, adv. [from formal.]
